JOHN CURTIN

Prime Minister John Curtin (1941-45) led Australia through the crisis of World War II.

He was born in Victoria in 1885 and moved to Western Australia in 1917 to become editor of the Westralian Worker.

Curtin entered politics as the federal Member for Fremantle in 1928 and rose to become parliamentary leader of the Australian Labor Party in 1935. Following the collapse of the Fadden government, Curtin became prime minister on 7 October, 1941.

He was a tireless worker on Australia’s behalf and his government put in place a plan for a better postwar Australia. Believing that ‘the peace must be won for the masses’, Curtin used his prime ministership to advance his dream of a fair go for all Australians, implementing Labor programs in the areas of economic reform, social services, immigration, education and foreign policy.

As a wartime leader he was able to transcend the differences within his own party and to unite the nation behind the war effort. He died on 5 July 1945 at the age of 60, less than six weeks before the end of the war in the Pacific.
